

Situated in the Channel Islands and English speaking, the Island of Guernsey shares the same time zone as London, conveniently placed between The Americas and the Far East and has good communication links to London and other parts of the United Kingdom and Continental Europe.

Guernsey is independent in legislative and fiscal matters and is not part of the European Union. As such, most EU directives do not apply in Guernsey.

Guernsey has a history of political stability and good governance and has legislation that is up-to-date, workable and in compliance with international standards.

Guernsey company law broadly follows English law principles and was updated in 2008 to simplify formation and improve corporate flexibility.

Guernsey trust law has also been updated very recently and is now one of the most modern trust laws available.

A well-established network of fiduciary, legal, accounting and banking service providers is located in Guernsey, providing a competitive and professional environment and ensuring high standards are maintained.
